Good morning, Mr. Greer.

Exactly six months ago today, we had the below exchange in which you claimed you were owed $225.25 and we graciously agreed you could offset that amount against payment of $1,000 in sanctions. In the intervening six months, you have not paid the $1,000 in sanctions (now increased to $1,500). On August 1, 2025, you suddenly claimed without any explanation at all that we owe you $350 rather than $225.25. There appears to have been no basis at all for that increased demand other than your own greed or failure to check the pleadings and emails in this case.

I write to remind you that the Court's deadline for us to receive your payment of $1,500 is August 18. You have previously complained that if I do not remind you of your obligation to obey court orders that is somehow the Defendants' fault, so this is a friendly reminder email. We will expect timely payment.

Best,

I agree with your math. $774.75 is the net judgment, allowing you a $225.25 credit arising from the costs award.

Hello,

So if the $225.25 is deducted, you want $774.75?

And ok I will withdraw the motion

Good afternoon,

In light of the below order, we request that you withdraw your motion at ECF No. 190 as moot. You may deduct $225.25 from your payment to us, as an offset. Should you fail to withdraw your motion at ECF No. 190, we will of course argue that it is moot in our response on February 28. But additionally, you will be liable for sanctions if we are forced to respond to a moot motion that you have failed to appropriately withdraw. "Plaintiff may be susceptible to sanctions for failing to withdraw the motion once it became moot." Dorado v. Murillo, 2024 Cal. Super. LEXIS 12966, *3 (Fe. 9, 2024).

Notwithstanding your vow to "appeal the hell out of this" on February 11, 2025, we also wish to advise you that an interlocutory appeal of a civil sanction is impermissible. "Sanctions, even if issued as civil contempt orders, generally are not deemed final appealable orders under 28 U.S.C. § 1291." Law v. NCAA, 134 F.3d 1438, 1440 (10th Cir. 1998). See also G.J.B. & Assocs., Inc. v. Singleton, 913 F.2d 824, 827-29 (10th Cir. 1990) (counsel of record may not file interlocutory appeal for imposition of sanctions); D&H Marketers, Inc. v. Freedom Oil & Gas, Inc., 744 F.2d 1443, 1445-46 (10th Cir. 1984) (parties may not file interlocutory appeal from imposition of sanctions); see also Consumers Gas & Oil, Inc., v. Farmland Indus., Inc., 84 F.3d 367, 370 (10th Cir. 1996) (party to a pending proceeding may appeal civil contempt order only as part of appeal from final judgment). Should you attempt an proceeding may appear on a contempt order only as part of appeal from that judgment). Should you attempt an interlocutory appeal which the appellate court has no jurisdiction to hear, you can expect that we will seek compensation under Fed. R. App. P. 38.
